County Awarded Research Assistance to Promote Immigrant Inclusion

Data, technical support provided to Office of Community Affairs' Immigrant Services

Redwood City — The Office of Community Affairs' Immigrant Services will receive research and technical assistance to better tailor local initiatives and outreach that promote immigrant inclusion thanks to a competitive Gateways for Growth (G4G) award given by New American Economy (NAE) and Welcoming America.

The County was one of 19 jurisdictions nationwide selected to build the infrastructure for economic, civic and social inclusion at the local level. The County is among the fourth cohort of G4G awardees.

G4G awardees will receive a combination of:

- Customized quantitative research reports from NAE on the demographic and economic contributions immigrants make in their communities; and/or
- Tailored technical assistance from NAE and Welcoming America to help communities draft, execute, and communicate a multi-sector immigrant inclusion strategy.

In light of the scale and severity of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Gateways for Growth Challenge this year prioritized localities that demonstrated a public-private commitment to better integrating immigrants into recovery efforts and emergency management systems.

The wide distribution of public health and safety information remains crucial to protecting the whole community. Knowing that almost half of San Mateo County's population speak a language other than English at home, the County ensured that health orders, changing guidance, and resources were made available in multiple languages. The County also focused efforts on connecting with residents in hard to reach communities and areas with a digital divide by canvassing door -to-door with bilingual information on COVID-19 resources and testing that carried no cost to the participant. The County’s “Community Crew” also distributed nearly 14,000 face coverings throughout the county to aid low-income residents who may not have access to or can afford protective gear.

“We are thrilled to see the Gateways for Growth Challenge expand to another set of localities that reflect the diversity of our nation,” said Christina Pope, senior network director at Welcoming America. “With each cohort, there is an opportunity to support and connect local leaders making their communities more welcoming and resilient places where everyone, including immigrants, can prosper and belong.”

“The Gateways for Growth program helps communities quantify what many people already know -- that immigrants play a key role in driving growth,” said Mo Kantner, director of state and local initiatives at New American Economy. “We’re excited to see how these communities can use data and technical assistance to support their work to ensure that all residents are welcome and have pathways to success.
